VIRGINIA GAZETTE.

OPEN TO ALL PARTIES, BUT INFLUENCED BY NONE.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY BY JOHN PINKNEY.

LONDON, October 29.

YESTERDAY, about noon, his majeſty went from the queen's palace to St. James's, attended by only two footmen behind his coach. About 10 minutes before 2, his majeſty got into the ſtate coach, attended by the duke of Ancaſter and lord Bruce, and proceeded to the houſe of peers, where, being ſeated on the throne, and a meſſage having been ſent to the commons, requiring their attendance, his majeſty opened the preſent ſeſſion of parliament with the following ſpeech:

MY LORDS AND GENTLEMEN,

THE preſent ſituation of America, and my conſtant deſire to have your advice, concurrence, and aſſiſtance, on every important occaſion, have determined me to call you thus early together.

Thoſe who have long too ſucceſsfully laboured to inflame my people in America, by groſs miſrepreſentations, and to infuſe into their minds a ſyſtem of opinions repugnant to the true conſtitution of the colonies, and to their ſubordinate relation to Great Britain, now openly avow their revolt, hoſtility and rebellion. They have raiſed troops, and are collecting a naval force; they have ſeized the public revenue, and aſſumed to themſelves legiſlative, executive, and judicial powers, which they already exerciſe, in the moſt arbitrary manner, over the perſons and properties of their fellow ſubjects. And although many of theſe unhappy people may ſtill retain their loyalty, and may be too wiſe not to ſee the fatal conſequence of this uſurpation, and wiſh to reſiſt it, yet the torrent of violence has been ſtrong enough to compel their acquieſcence till a ſufficient force ſhall appear to ſupport them.

The authors and promoters of this deſperate conſpiracy have, in the conduct of it, derived great advantage from the difference of our intentions and theirs. They meant only to amuſe by vague expreſſions of attachment to the parent ſtate, and the ſtrongeſt proteſtations of loyalty to me, whilſt they were preparing for a general revolt. On our part, though it was declared in your laſt ſeſſion that a rebellion exiſted within the province of the Maſſachuſetts Bay, yet even that province we wiſhed rather to reclaim than to ſubdue. The reſolutions of parliament breathed a ſpirit of moderation and forbearance, conciliatory propoſitions accompanied the meaſures taken to enforce authority, and the coercive acts were adopted to eaſes of criminal combinations amongſt ſubjects not then in arms. I have acted with the ſame temper; anxious to prevent, if it had been poſſible, the effuſion of the blood of my ſubjects, and the calamities which are inſeparable from a ſtate of war, ſtill hoping that my people in America would have diſcerned the traiterous views of their leaders, and have been convinced, that to be a ſubject of Great Britain, with all its conſepuences, is to be the freeſt member of any civil ſociety in the known world.

The rebellious war now levied is become more general, and is manifeſtly carried on for the purpoſe of eſtabliſhing an independent empire. I need not dwell upon the fatal effects of the ſucceſs of ſuch a plan.

The object is too important, the ſpirit of the Britiſh nation too high, the reſources with which God hath bleſſed her too numerous, to give up ſo many colonies which ſhe has planted with great induſtry, nurſed with great tenderneſs, encouraged with many commercial advantages, and protected and defended at much expence of blood and treaſure.

It is now become the part of wiſdom, and (in its effects) of clemency, to put a ſpeedy end to theſe diſorders, by the moſt deciſive exertions. For this purpoſe, I have encreaſed my naval eſtabliſhment, and greatly augmented my land forces, but in ſuch a manner as may be the leaſt burthenſome to my kingdoms.

I have alſo the ſatisfaction to inform you that I have received the moſt friendly offers of foreign aſſiſtance; and if I ſhall make any treaties in conſequence thereof, they ſhall be laid before you. And I have, in teſtimony of my affection for my people, who can have no cauſe in which I am not equally intereſted, ſent to the garriſons of Gibraltar and Port Mahon a part of my electoral troops, in order that a larger number of the eſtabliſhed forces of this kingdom may be applied to the maintenance of its authority; and the national militia, planned and regulated with equal regard to the rights, ſafety, and protection, of my crown and people, may give a farther extent and activity to our military operations.

When the unhappy and deluded multitude, againſt whom this force will be directed, ſhall become ſenſible of their error, I ſhall be ready to receive the miſled with tenderneſs and mercy; and in order to prevent the inconveniencies which may ariſe from the great diſtance of their ſituation, and to remove, as ſoon as poſſible, the calamities which they ſuffer, I ſhall give authority to certain perſons upon the ſpot to grant general or particular pardons and indemnities, in ſuch manner, and to ſuch perſons, as they ſhall think fit, and to receive the ſubmiſſion of any province or colony which ſhall be diſpoſed to return to its allegiance. It may be alſo proper to authorize the perſons ſo commiſſioned to reſtore ſuch province or colony, ſo returning to its allegiance, to the free exerciſe of its trade and commeree, and to the ſame protection and ſecurity as if ſuch province or colony had never revolted.

GENTLEMEN of the HOUSE of COMMONS

I have ordered the proper eſtimates for the enſuing year to be laid before you, and I rely on your affection to me, and your reſolution to maintain the juſt rights of this country, for ſuch ſupplies, as the preſent circumſtances of our affairs require. Among the many unavoidable ill conſequences of this rebellion, none affects me more ſenſibly than the extraordinary burthen which it muſt create to my faithful ſubjects.

My LORDS and GENTLEMEN,

I have fully opened to you my views and intentions. The conſtant employment of my thoughts, and the moſt earneſt wiſhes of my heart, tend wholly to the ſafety and happineſs of all my people, and to the re-eſtabliſhment of order and tranquility through the ſeveral parts of my dominions, in a cloſe connection and conſtitutional dependence. You ſee the tendency of the preſent diſorders, and I have ſtated to you the meaſures which I mean to purſue for ſuppreſſing them. Whatever remains to be done, that may farther contribute to this end, I commit to your wiſdom. And I am happy to add, that, as well from the aſſurances I have received, as from the general appearance of affairs in Europe, I ſee no probability that the meaſures which you may adopt, will be interrupted by diſputes with any foreign power.

Mr. PINKNEY,

AS the miniſtry, and their tools, have perſiſted in charging America with a deſire of independence, and, in ſpight of all the moſt ſolemn declarations on her part, that ſhe is ſtill (or rather, I hope, was) willing to be ſubject to Britain as compleatly as ſhe was in the year 1763, and as we have good reaſon to ſuppoſe, great as their luſt of power is, that avarice has the greateſt ſhare in influencing their conduct, and that therefore not merely an empty title to ſuperiority is claimed, or even a ſubſtantial revenue, but that ſomething more is inſiſted on, the total monopoly of our trade; I ſay, as theſe things are evident, we have juſt cauſe of complaint, and may well reſent ſuch low ſuſpicion, and baſe treatment. Whoever conſiders the acts of parliament, laying reſtrictions on the trade of the colonies before the year 1763, will be aſtoniſhed to find that the congreſs, after one of their petitions had been treated with contempt, and a bloody, perfidious, and inhuman war, was entered into againſt them, ſhould conſent that thoſe acts ſhould ſtill be binding on them! When we entered into an aſſociation not to trade with Great Britain, provided ſhe had been contented to try who could hold out longeſt, and ſee who would repent firſt, and make the firſt overtures of an accommodation, it would have been right to have contented ourſelves with our own manufactures: But when they not only laugh at our efforts in this way, and affect to deſpiſe our whole trade as of no importance to them, but alſo have, by levying againſt us a heavy and ſavage war, obliged us to incur many and great expences, and to neglect in many ports of our country, agriculture and manufactures, we muſt be fools indeed not to open our ports, and to try what value may be put on our trade by France and Spain, and how we may thereby influence them in our favour, and endeavour, by our trade, to procure every thing neceſſary for the ſupport of the war, and our defence and comfort. By doing this we pave the way to a powerful alliance, and by it may humble the pride of our enemies, may ſhew them we bid defiance to their attempts to enſlave us, and that, ſo far from being ſufferers for want of their trade, we can do ten times better without it. If the ports were open to all nations, except the Britiſh, we might ſoon ſink our paper money, and our eſtates would be of ten times their preſent value. Our tobacco, hemp, flax, cotton, tar, pitch, turpentine, iron, lead, ſtaves, and lumber; our wheat, oats, barley, rye, rice, Indian corn, peas, beans, &c. &c. might be ſold for their real value, in caſh, or ſuch commodities as we might wiſh to barter them for: Our tobacco would then always command a good price, and ready money; we ſhould ſeldom get leſs than 30 or 40s a hundred for it in caſh; good wheat would ſell for 6 or 7 ſhillings a buſhel, and all other things in proportion; and, inſtead of paying the high price we now do for Britiſh goods bought of Scotch factors, at an extravagant rate after ſelling them our tobacco for a mere nothing, we ſhould buy every thing equally good, if not better, at half price, and often get them in exchange for articles of our produce, which now we never attend to: The truth of this can be aſſerted by thoſe who have traded in French, Spaniſh, Dutch, or Italian ports. Claret would then be as cheap as Madeira wine, and velvet as broad cloth, and rum, ſugar, molaſſes, wine, oyl, olives, French brandy, arrack, tea, ſpices, &c. &c. would be exchanged here for ſuch neceſſaries, or rarities, as would be wanted in the different ſhips, by the captains, factors, or men, and by their friends and cuſtomers, at the different ports they come from. Our ports would then be filled with ſhips, and our towns with reſpectable merchants; the value of our country would ſoon be known abroad, and numbers of people of ingenuity and property would come and ſettle among us. We ſhould have the trade protected againſt our preſent oppreſſors, the ampleſt means of defence afforded us, and even Great Britain herſelf would ſoon court our favour, and be willing to form a commercial league with us. Let any one conſider theſe things, and then let him ſay whether he would heſitate a moment to open our ports.

AN AMERICAN.

Mr. PINKNEY,

WHAT muſt the humane part of mankind ſay when they are told that orders have been given, by our moſt gracious ſoverign, to take away the Mediterranean paſſes from all American veſſels, that they might be taken by the pirates who infeſt thoſe ſeas? This is another inſtance of that depth of policy with which the preſent ſyſtem of deſpotiſm is laid, and of the unheard of cruelty with which it is to be executed. Every day brings to light ſome new refinement in villainy! It is an undoubted fact, that laſt ſummer an American at Leghorn with difficulty preſerved his paſs, and that was done as a favour to him, and by the particular interpoſition of powerful friends to the owner of the veſſel. The tories may deny this, but we have ſufficient proof in our poſſeſſion in a letter from the captain to his employer.

I am, AN AMERICAN.

MR. PINKNEY,

I BELIEVE your correſpondent of the 10th inſtant, who propoſed the queſtion in gunnery, had too much reaſon to fear that but few amongſt us knew much about that matter. However, I have met with one or two, ſince that queſtion appeared, who profeſſed they could ſolve it, ſo that I ſuppoſe your Saturday's paper will abound with anſwers. If I ſhould be miſtaken in this conjecture, you may inſert the following ſolution, which was obtained in the following manner: Perpendicular to the horizon draw a right line, A C, equal to the height, which a body muſt fall to acquire the force of projection; at right angles to A C from the point C draw the right line, C E, equal to the horizontal diſtance of the object to be hit; from the point E draw E K parallel to C A, and equal to C A together with the height of the point of projection above the object; then with A and K as centres, and with the radii A C and K E deſcribe circles which will interſect each other in ſome point, which call F; join F A and F K. F then, from the known properties of the parabola, muſt be the focus of a parabola paſſing through A and K, or the parabola deſcribed by a ball ſhot from A, which will hit K. Biſect the angle C A F by the right line A B, which A B, as it is a tangent to the parabola in the point A, muſt be one of the directions ſought. The other is eaſily found; for as the diſtance given is not the greateſt range, the object can be hit by two directions. The elevation obtained was 56° 37'30" upon ſuppoſition that the author, who I declare is unknown to me, meant the horizontal diſtance of the object to be 8560. As there are various methods of ſolving ſuch queſtions, I ſhould be glad to ſee the queriſt's in your paper, and ſhall have no objection to carry on ſome little correſpondence with him through the ſame channel.

PHILADELPHIA.

In CONGRESS, Saturday, November 11, 1775.

RESOLVED, that it be recommended to ſuch proprietors of tobacco warehouſes and tobacco houſes in Virginia and Maryland as cannot ſpeedily have the earth of the floors of their houſes worked for ſalt petre, that they cauſe thoſe floors to be ſoon dug up and left fine, looſe, and light, at leaſt 6 inches deep, ſuffering the tobacco ſtalks and trafhy leaves to be ſpread thereon, and leaving the doors open, eſpecially in dry weather, as often as convenience will permit, whereby the ſoil will be much the more impregnated with nitrous particles, the manufacture of ſalt petre facilitated, and the quantity thereof greatly increaſed.

CHARLES THOMSON, ſecretary.

WILLIAMSBURG.

Extract of a letter from a gentleman at Norfolk to the printer, dated January 7.

I DOUBT not you have heard before this of the furious cannonade with which the enemy opened the year. They began about 3 in the afternoon of new year's day, and continued, with very little intermiſſion, for 9 hours. Every thing that could carry a gun, from a frigate to a boat, played againſt us. Under the cover of their cannon, they ſet fire to the town in four different places, and made ſeveral attempts to land field pieces, but were repulſed with loſs. The horror of the night exceeds deſcription, and gives freſh occaſion to lament the conſequences of civil war. The thunder of artillery, the crush of falling houses, the roar of devouring flames, added to the piteous moans, and piercing shrieks, of the few remaining wretched, ruined inhabitants, form the outlines of a picture too distressful to behold without a tear. I pray God I may never see the like again. We had 2 or 3 men wounded, none mortally; it is said several of the enemy were killed. The large distillery down the river was set on fire the night of the cannonade, and Sprowle's houses, two or three nights after. In short, desolation and ruin have overspread the face of the country, and the once populous town of Norfolk now resembles, in miniature, the ruins of Palmyra! We have met with no loss since our arrival in this place, excepting 3 men made prisoners by the enemy, nor have we had a wounded man, except 3 or 4 of a detached party, in a small skirmish the night of our arrival; besides these, we have had none hurt before or since the cannonade. I know not how long we shall stay here; at present, every thing appears in the greatest confusion.

We hear that 60 tons of saltpetre have been imported at Philadelphia, and that 1300 barrels of gunpowder are landed at different places to the northward; we understand a vast quantity more is shortly expected.

It is said that an express lately arrived at the congress, purporting that general Washington had ordered all the main artillery to Litchmore's Point, with a view to burn Boston, which was thought very expedient; also that general Montgomery, with 3000 men, had joined colonel Arnold before Quebec, and were reinforced with 2500 Canadians; their army now consists of between 5 and 6000 men.

We are informed that commissioners are absolutely appointed by government to come to America, in order to negotiate terms of an accommodation.

It is confidently asserted that 600 Georgean troops had marched for St. Augustine, in order to subject that place in favour of the united colonies.

Died, in an advanced age, Mr. Alexander Craig, of this city. We have not time properly to characterize this worthy gentleman. He was always remarkable for his honesty and benevolence.

The following malicious, false, and ignorant LETTER, from James Imrie to John Hay, merchant in Glasgow, was lately intercepted.

NORTHAMPTON, December 16, 1775.

MY DEAR SIR,

THE last time I wrote you was by Mr. Hugh Risk; since which I have not had the least opportunity. I send this to Norfolk by a gentleman of my acquaintance, who says he will endeavour to forward it. There is but little chance of its getting to you, as the inhabitants of Norfolk are all on board the king's ships. The regulars and Virginians have had a battle. The former were defeated, with the loss of about sixty men. The soldiers rather behaved rashly than bravely; for about one hundred attacked near three thousand, well entrenched. It is a pity such brave fellows should die. There never were such times in America as at present. We are in a very terrible situation; we shall either be obliged to take up arms or be confined; besides, they have a very great antipathy to our countrymen, for what reason I know not. I am determined to stand out the war, and, if possible, take up arms on neither side. I am afraid the breach is now so wide as to be irreparable; the one country or the other must fall. I suppose we shall have bloody work by the spring.

Mr. Atchison wrote you a letter or two the other day; I hope one of them will get home. We feel for you very much, but cannot assist you in the least. Cash was never scarcer. I am afraid it will be the longer the worse.

The plantation is large, and well adapted for wheat, tobacco, and corn. The terms may be known by applying to the subscriber, who lives near the same place. 6m JOHN WARE.

JULIA WHEATLEY,

MIDWIFE, &c. &c.

TAKES this method of informing the public that she has removed from Norfolk to the town of Richmond, where she proposes to carry on her business as heretofore. She can also cure the most inveterate ringworms, scald heads, sore eyes, and has a certain cure for the worms, gravel, and many other disorders incident to both the sexes. Her former success in the cure of the several disorders here mentioned, as well as in her profession of a midwife, while resident in Norfolk, she hopes will entitle her to the favours of the gentlemen and ladies adjacent to Richmond.——Mrs. Wheatley's daughter also proposes opening a BOARDING SCHOOL for young ladies, and to instruct them in reading, writing, and arithmetic, the French language, &c. also different kinds of needle work; the tambour worked and taught. The school will be opened as soon as a sufficient number of scholars are engaged. She has already engaged near a dozen scholars, and will open the school at the house in which she now lives, in the town of Richmond, which is well accommodated for the purpose. The favours of all gentlemen and ladies will be thankfully acknowledged. 3*

A TRACT of LAND on Nottoway river, in Sussex county, with several orchards thereon, and a plantation sufficient to work 8 or 10 hands. The land is exceeding good for grain, and not inferior to any on the river. There are houses sufficient for the reception of a family, and would be a suitable retirement for any gentleman, exposed on the large rivers, who is inclinable to remove into the country. It is the place where William Moore formerly lived. The land may be shewn to any person desiring it, and the terms made known by one who will attend for that purpose. 2*

RUN away from the subscriber in Fauquier county, the 15th of August last, a likely negro fellow, named GEORGE, about 20 years of age, near 6 feet high, straight made, and talks slow. He was the property of one Hightower, in the lower part of Virginia, about 2 years ago, and was brought from thence by one Silvester Adams, and it is probable that he may have gone that way again. Whoever will apprehend the said fellow, and convey him to gaol, shall be allowed every charge agreeable to law, and for bringing him to me shall have FIVE POUNDS, and reasonable charges paid.

4 JOHN HUNTER.

RUN away from the subscriber, in Albemarle, a mulatto man, named GABRIEL, about 52 or 53 years of age, and was formerly the property of Mrs. Thornton, who lived in York county, at the mouth of Queen's creek. He has a free woman for his wife, who goes by the name of Betty Baines, and lives in Gloucester county. It is likely he may be lurking about that place, or on the Eastern Shore, as he formerly lived there, and is well acquainted in all the lower parts. He plays exceedingly well on the violin. Whoever takes up the said slave, and secures him, so that I get him again, or delivers him to Rowland Jones, of James City, shall receive FIVE POUNDS reward. 2 JOHN HUDSON.

I believe he has alſo a ſcar on one ſide of his forehead, and one on one of his legs; he is a handy fellow in a houſe or ſtable, very ſenſible, exceeding talkative, and fond of ſtrong drink. He rides and dances well, and was formerly the property of Mr. Aylett, in King William county, and raiſed by majorGanes, deceaſed. Charles White, by trade a ſtocking weaver, born in Rutlandſhire, about 28 years of age, 5 feet 10 inches high, ſlim made, ſhort dark brown hair, pug noſe, high cheek bones, ſallow countenance, having had the flux lately, and his hands broke out in biles; had on, or took with him, a ſmall felt hat, an old black cloth coat, old brown cloth breeches, mottled worſted ſtockings, two ſhirt and trowſers, and new ſhoes with carved metal buckles. James Leighton, born in Cambridgeſhire, about 20 years of age, 5 feet 8 or 9 inches high, ſtrong and clumſy made, ſwarthy complexion, full face, thick lips, grey eyes, and ſtraight hair; had on a ſmall felt hat, brown cloth jacket, with ſleeves, tow ſhirt and trowſers, and good ſhoes, tied with ſtrings. Negro man named Will, about 20 years of age, 5 feet 9 or 10 inches high, ſlim made, large eyes, and ſhews the whites of them much; had on an old cloth coat, tow ſhirt, old oznabrig trowſers, good ſhoes, tied with ſtrings, and had about his neck an iron collar, with the horns cut off, being a notorious runaway, and much given to drinking. It is probable they may change their dreſs, as they are ſuppoſed to have ſtolen the following articles, viz. a dark brown cloth coat, with plated buttons, an old aſh coloured duroy coat, black velvet jacket, with leather pockets, a new aſh coloured cloth jacket, with high topped horn buttons, a pair of light coloured Germantown ſtockings, a pair of white cotton ditto, a fine ſhirt, two fine ſhifts, and a check apron. White has been heard to ſay ſome atrocious things in reſpect to the diſpute between Great Britain and the colonies, from which it is ſuſpected they may part, and ſome of them make to ſeaports. Whoever ſecures the ſaid ſervants, ſo that I get them again, ſhall receive eight dollars for each of the white ſervants, and what the law allows for the negro. ISAAC ZANE.
